You guys celebrating this may just be celebrating the loss of your own freedoms. Don't be fools. This isn't good nor is it right.

My, my, that idea just scares me to death. I guess I should be a damned hypocrite and say that I'm sorry someone offed the lousey ration of skunksqueeze.

Not in this life.

What a hypocrite that doctor was to even attend a Christian Church.

I have a feeling his office may be closed tomorrow morn. And that's a good thing.

But this is a lose/lose situation. It was not right for anyone to have killed anyone.

What galls me most is the article. The article describes this guy as a "late term abortion provider."

Why not label the doctor what he was, a partial birth abortion provider? The man committed infanticide, legally.

And, yes, I agree with you, this will have a bad ending for us abortion opponents.

Due to the innocuous euphemism used to describe what this doctor engaged in, there will be no sympathy for abortion foes.

My mom is a "right to choose" person. Yet, even she thinks partial birth abortion is an atrocity. Most people agree that partial birth abortion is infanticide.

Instead, the press will portray this doctor as a paragon of community spirit, family values and work ethic.

The spin already started with this article.

Would we have mourned at the murder of those who ran Auschwitz ?

Nor do I here. But I will say a prayer for his departed soul that perhaps, somehow, he may find rest.

Hmmm. The shooter no doubt committed murder by our laws.

Whether he will be judged as a murderer by God may be an open question, and none of us know the answer.

In 1942 Reinhard Heydrich was killed in Prague in cold blood. Czech commandos committed what was by the law of the land murder. They were from a country that had surrendered and they were not in uniform. They did this because he was orchestrating the destruction of the Czech people. Did they kill a tyrant or commit murder or both? There is also the case of course of John Brown and slavery.

Yes we must obey our laws, until we can no longer live with the result of not obeying them.

You, also, are entitled to your opinion. Equivocators and appeasers have something to say, too....Pardon me if it falls on deaf ears.

Apart from the many children that will now not be killed by him (which is obviously a good thing) tell me how his martyrdom (and you can be sure that that's the word the abortion lovers will use) will help the pro life cause.

I could give you a dozen major reasons why it will hurt the cause...overall...particularly with a Maoist like Hussein in the WH and RATS like Bella Pelosi in charge of Congress.

I hope everyone here is intelligent enough not to openly celebrate this murder. For all we know, he might have cut the guy off on traffic, or been his ex-brother-in-law, nobody knows yet. But whatever, that was a sick SOB to shoot a man as he walked into church.

Innocent people, maybe kids, had to watch that. And on top of that, if a man is walking towards a church, theres always hope God is about to speak to his heart that day.
Not cool on church steps. Not in the least.

The act is reminiscent of "Unintended Consequences." Or perhaps, following up on some other Freepers comments above it is a false flag act, more similar to the one at the start of Travi's first book "Enemies Foreign and Domestic". We shall have to let things play out for a while before we have enough context to say more.

There will be more abortions because of this. For the first time, a majority were describing themselves as "pro-life." That won't happen again, and it will be harder to make the pro-life case.

As much as I detested this man in life, his murder is a tragic blow for our movement.

Ideally, he would have had a CONVERSION and realize the horrors he's authored. Now, he'll simply be a martyr for the abortuary industry, bathed in the gentle light the MSM will produce, while we're painted as monsters.

You make the mistake of thinking that the abortion debate is won or lost in the judicial and political end of the spectrum. As important as these two arena's are, that isn't where they are won at all.

This is won or lost in the hearts and minds of ordinary people, and in that arena, the Leftists have already lost.

There may be a little setback in politics, but it can't last long, as the tide is running strongly against the abortionists.

Exactly, its a leftist dream. ABORTION doctor shot and killed by a GUN, as he walked into CHURCH.

They will make his death a rally against people who oppose Abortion.
They will use it to justify gun control.
And dont forget,, the guy will be a "domestic terrorist".

This is the worst setback for our side since that murderous assassin Rudolph. Not to mention, its not a tactic Jesus our lord ever used.

It is simply wrong to ambush and kill another human being. You have a good point. It will be used by those invested in our national killing factories to marginalize pro-life. What this person did was very selfish—he/she may have enjoyed self-gratification for an instant but does not help the cause of life whatsoever.

I agree that he would do it, but i think he's cunning enough to sit and wait for some nut to do something, then immediately capitalize on it. I think its more likely that they had already brainstormed how they respond to things like this.

Look for term “domestic or homegrown terror”, look for this theme right as he goes to the Middle east for his speech. He might even showcase it as an example terror is just as common in christianity.

True, however killing to prevent a serial killer from claiming his next victim probably doesn't fit into the category of murder...

Engaging in extra-judicial killing of people who are engaged in legally sanctioned killing (whether abortion or executing criminals) is a slippery slope you don't want to go down.

Imagine if liberals started killing prison guards/chaplains etc... that were involved in executions.

There's a reason we're a nation of laws and not men. Excusing the killer in this case is fundamentally anti-american. If you want to get rid of abortion, do it in the courts and in the realm of public opinion. Otherwise you just push America one step closer to totalitarianism. I'm sure the feds already monitor FR. How much do you want to bet that somebody in this thread gets a knock on the door?
